gnewsense 6.0 to be able to run window manager applications. I've followed the howto but I had some problems. From what I understood I had to change config files in order to have a window manager application actually start. I tried to do that but I was unable to get the window manager to run. I did a bit of reading and it seems that I need to run gst-launch-0.10 in the background, which I did and it started but my program which is an applet doesn't start. This is my first experience with Linux and I'm rather new to it. Please help me get my window manager up and running. Thanks. A: Don't use gnnewsense. Use Debian and get some experience with it.
